

Other gamma-ray bursts come from large stars at the end of their lives. Their cores collapse, and they explode as supernovae.